The Biggest Reunion Ever

The Grossmont Union High School District is turning 75 years old and you're invited to a party

by Cynthia O'Neill

High school reunions always bring a sense of completion and recognition to those attending. The 75th Celebration of Grossmont Union High School District on Saturday will be no different.

Stop. Wait.

It will be very different.

Eighteen-year-olds will talk about their school days with alumni several decades older. Together they will eat barbecued chicken and share stories of how they 'felt chicken' on their prom nights. June 1 will be the biggest picnic and reunion Grossmont School District has ever seen.

Ray Standsbury, dean of Instruction and Professional Development speaks with a quiet joy about the upcoming event. He graduated in 1962 from El Capitan and remembers when Life magazine did a huge spread on the ASB convention.

"The magazine chose the Grossmont District for its nominating convention of school officers — it was a huge, three-day event," he said. "I felt so proud to be part of the district."

He read a letter written by Alice Porter, class of '23 and on the editorial staff of the Grossmont High School El Recuerdo.

"Listen to this: 'Surely our school must become greater and bigger there on the hilltop where the presence of the Maker will ever be visible.'"

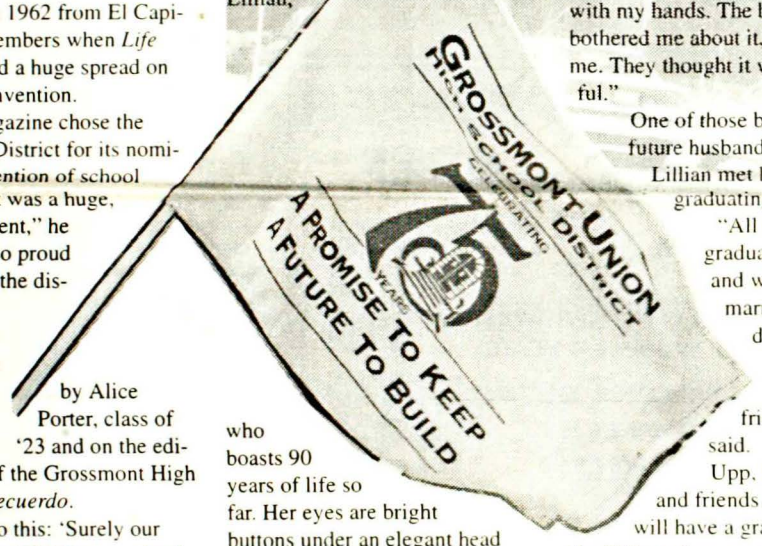
Lillian Upp

Standsbury fell into silence once again, looking out the window of the ivy-covered building he and his colleagues affectionately call "the Main."

"What makes this district special, I believe, is the feeling of belonging," he said. "I believe the celebration is a metaphor in terms of a giving community such as what we have here in the district."

Standsbury can still name every teacher he ever had while in the district. And he says that his son and daughter had some of the same teachers he did.

One of the district's very first students, Lillian Upp, talks gregariously about her favorite teacher — Eva McCarthy. "She was my English and Dramatics teacher, she had started out new and I loved her because she paid attention to me," said Lillian, who boasts 90 years of life so far. Her eyes are bright buttons under an elegant head of white hair.



In her days at Grossmont High School, they used to have junior and senior plays. Then when Associated Student Body got into the picture, Lillian's teacher, McCarthy, chose her when she was just a sophomore to star in "Daddy Longlegs."

"She always used to go to New York to see 10 or 20 plays and then she'd come back to us to review them," she recalls. "She liked my long, long hair. I could sit on it. And the main character, in 'Daddy Longlegs,' Judy, had long braided hair. So I was Judy."

McCarthy eventually married the principal, Carl Quicksall.

The first year she attended the Grossmont Union District, Lillian went to the Lakeside school — Riverview Union High School. Then, for the next three years, she attended Grossmont High School at the same location where it is today.

She remembers that the cooks made excellent food in the cafeteria. "I guess it was easier back then because the school was smaller.," she says. "And we always had good cooking classes — do they still? We used to cook great things in Home Economics and then eat them."

But she ventured further than cooking. She made her own cedar chest in wood shop class.

"I was the only girl in there," she recalls. "I liked to do things with my hands. The boys never bothered me about it, were nice to me. They thought it was wonderful."

One of those boys was her future husband, Horace. Lillian met him in her graduating class.

"All our friends graduated together and we all stayed married till death, no divorces among my friends," she said.

Upp, Standsbury and friends old and new will have a grand time at the 75th anniversary of the district. The event will be held on the campus of Grossmont High School in La Mesa. There will be an honoring of distinguished graduates and of district achievements. A $5 donation will help raise funds for the district. San Diego radio personality and district alum "Shotgun Tom" Kelly will serve as emcee.

There will be a business fair, entertainment, a historical photographic and memorabilia presentation. A classic car show and student art and photography show are also sure to entertain.

And hold your breath for some of the prizes that will be available for the raffle. Five dollars will get you a lot of unforgettable fun and a new perspective of Grossmont Union High School District.

Well over 60 items have been donated for the silent auction and raffle as part of the celebration.

Lillian Upp will be on hand for anyone who wants to hear about the old days.

"I never thought I'd be here to celebrate 75 years of my high school," she says. "I feel privileged that I am okay, not in a rest home. I've had a loving family which has kept me young through four generations."

The Grossmont Story

by Norrie West

It has been 75 years since Grossmont Union High School was built and opened to 365 eager students.

And it was the only such school in the territory for 29 years. Finally World War II growth and post-war expansion forced the Grossmont Union High School District to add a second institution for high schoolers, Helix, in 1951.

William Gross

And ever since then, as the area's population exploded, an additional eight have risen, in this order: El Cajon Valley High in 1955, Mt. Miguel in 1956, El Capitan in 1959, Granite Hills in 1960, Monte Vista 1961, Santana 1965, Valhalla 1975 and West Hills 1987.

The district got its name from a small next-door mountain called Grossmont. It comes as no surprise that most of us are not quite sure where it starts and where it ends; it is, after all, just a foothill covered with homes like any other metropolitan area.

It would have looked much different 90 years ago when there was nothing but brush, weeds and trees adorning its slopes. And there were rattlesnakes, coyotes and rabbits on the prowl.

Although the Grossmont name is ubiquitous, the old mountain is like a scarlet woman, with a past worth knowing.

Thus this story, much of which is based on the documentation so well presented by Hubert Guy in his masterwork, Grossmont Isn't Just A Shopping Center. After you read this, the book is a must.

We begin by turning back the hands of time to 1888. A tall 15-year-old handsome young man has just arrived in San Diego from far-off Boston. A long ride on a train, for sure, especially by yourself at that age. And it cost him just $20.

His sister Bessie has invited him to San Diego. She lives there and likes it.

What he needs of course is a job. And he gets one by selling 54 boxes of apples for a produce company, who knew they should not have bought the apples in the first place.

And so he gets a job at the princely sum of $5 a week. But that is just fine, he has already made $10 profit from the apple sales.

Oh yeah, his name. First name Edward, family name Fletcher.

As time went by that was a name to remember. One thing you could always say about Ed

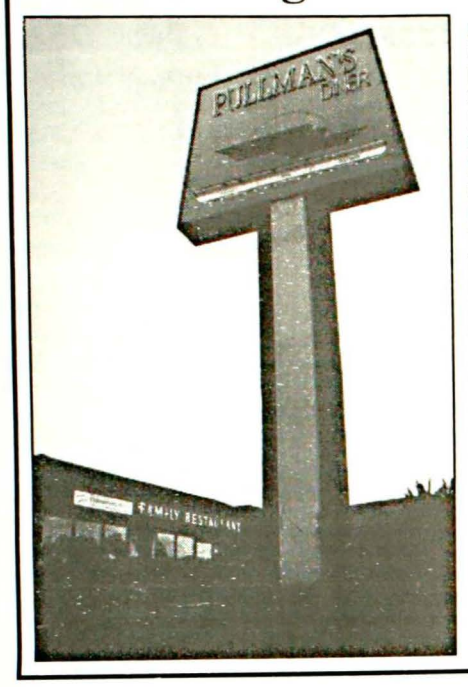
Give us a sign



A longtime Lemon Grove landmark — Heidi's Family Restaurant on Broadway — is being completely transformed into Pullman's Diner. The big sign is finally up and the ribbon is cut. Pullman's proprietors Curtis Moore and Eli Saenz have a number of grand opening activities set for June.

Huzzah! Huzzah!

I guess the best thing I can say is Huzzah, Huzzah!! Lemon Grove has done it again, but then we knew it would, didn't we? I am referring to a one-ballot decision on the appointment to fill the council vacancy. With three very fine candidates to choose from, the agonizing decision was made to select Jeff Jandura to fill the vacant chair. From my seat in the audience, I could see even more clearly how difficult the choice was to make. I congratulate Mr. Jandura and welcome him into the new world of city councilism. I was very impressed with both Jill Greer and Mark Pettis, and I hope that this disappointment does not dampen their vigor to be involved in community affairs. Mr. Shelley belabored the term "involvement" in his very emotional speech in qualification of his choice. But it is that term that virtually says it all where city government is concerned.

When I was involved in this same type of situation, I guess that I was so preoccupied with the process that the perspective was a narrow one. However, when observing it from the other side of the dais, it struck me that there was something lacking. The way the nomination was made, it seemed that the other two candidates did not get the attention that they might have deserved. Without quarreling with their decision, I would submit that possibly it would have been best if a preliminary vote of preference had been taken, without a specific nomination. Let us say that, in such a process, each of the candidates received a vote. It would clearly show where the consensus was, if any. It would have either made a clear distinction if such were the case, or it would have set the stage for some debate of the qualifications of each by the council members. Having each state their reasons may well have brought more light to the decision and, thereby, a better consensus.

Just a thought for future similar situations. Jeff Jandura was an excellent choice and will be a great councilman, I am sure.

I have to say that I did enjoy seeing how the other half lives and reacts at council meetings. One can second-guess and rethink what goes on, and the semi-audible remarks that pass around the back of the room are "very interesting." I find it even harder to understand why more of the residents of our town do not attend the meetings. It is great theater and it provides a wealth of understanding. If more people understood the government process, the pitfalls, the enigmas and the magnitude of the problems that mere humans have to deal with, it would be better. We would have better government, and those who serve in it would be more responsible and better able to do their jobs.

We owe a vote of thanks for the nine people who offered themselves in the gauntlet that was run for that council seat. These are the true metal of Lemon Grove, and they make it the best place on earth.

Holocaust survivor to speak Sunday

David Faber, a survivor of the Holocaust, will speak at 6 p.m. Sunday at Lemon Grove Lutheran Church about his terrifying experiences.

The church is located at 2055 Skyline Dr.

As a Polish youth, Faber — now a Del Cerro resident — was part of a loving family. First confined to a ghetto, then brutalized, the family was ruthlessly murdered.

His book, Because of Romek, co-authored with Prof. James Kitchen, recounts all of the suffering he endured as well as that of more than 6 million others.

He talks of hiding under a sofa when Nazis came to the family apartment, breaking down the door and shooting his mother and sister in cold blood.

Stiff with fear, he stayed under the sofa until everyone had left and crawled out to fling himself on his mother's stiff, cold body. His body trembling with sobs, he promised his mother that he would survive, find his sister in London and never forget what happened.

He also recounts how he watched the Nazis grill his brother Romek, then beat him, stick a red-hot poker in one of Romek's eyes, squeeze his face (with some instrument) into an open, sapless mass - then, finally, cut out his tongue.

Faber was spared because the Nazis thought he was too little to know anything.

As anyone knows who has visited those terrible death camps, all of this, and more, happened with a ferocity that was unbelievable! At the time, horrified people vowed that such things would never happen again.

Yet today, we see and hear of skinheads terrorizing those of other races. Faber warns us not to be complacent, believing it "can't happen again!"

The members of Lemon Grove Lutheran Church invite you to come hear this "gentle giant" recount what happened. For more information, call 465-7301.

Hospice offers camp for grieving kids

Saturday, Grossmont Hospice of Sharp HealthCare will conduct the Rainbow Kid's Camp, a one-day bereavement camp for children who have lost a loved one.

The camp gives children the opportunity to spend the day with other children who are also learning to cope with grief.

For children who experience the death of a loved one, returning to school and playing with old friends may be difficult. Children are rarely around peers who can comprehend what they are experiencing.

The day begins with a visit from the therapy dogs and includes working on art projects, playing games and hiking. As their final activity, the group will plant a memorial tree.

Another program, which has been offered through Grossmont Hospice of Sharp HealthCare since 1990, is the Children's Bereavement Program that coordinates groups for both children and parents.

A child who is having difficulty with the death of a loved one may experience chronic headaches, sleeplessness, depression or poor school performance. In children's groups, trained counselors guide children through grief using art, music and other interactive media. By encouraging open expression, Hospice counselors assist children to heal, rather than risk the consequences of suppressed grief.

While the children are meeting, parents participate in their own group. Here, counselors help parents become aware of how their grief affects not only themselves but also their children. These ten-week groups are offered throughout the year. Graduates of the program may attend monthly alumni groups as needed for further support.

Much of the funding for the Rainbow Kid's Camp and the art therapy programs comes from grants provided by Grossmont Hospital's Foundation. For more information about the Rainbow Kid's Camp and other bereavement programs, call Scott Johnson at 463-9911.

Councilman appointed

Lemon Grove Planning Commissioner Jeff Jandura, 46, was appointed to the Lemon Grove City Council Tuesday night on the first ballot after hours of interviews and deliberations. Councilmen Tom Clabby, Craig Lake and Dwight Shelley voted for Jandura after Clabby proposed his nomination. Mayor Mary Sessom voted against Jandura, having favored Mark Pettis in last week's preliminary nominations. Jandura is an attorney who has lived in Lemon Grove the last 9 years.

Grossmont Story

Fletcher was he did things, and mostly he did them right.

And one of the best things he ever did was to name Grossmont, although he says it was his sister's idea.

His conspirator, William Gross, had helped him buy that mountain, so he should be recognized. Originally it was Mount Gross. But Fletcher didn't like it...it lacked that certain something. And so at Bessie's suggestion he named it Grossmont.

That was a long time ago-90 years-yes, 1906 and a time when Fletcher and Gross were deeply involved in "selling" that small east-of-La Mesa mountain and surrounding acres to future inland dwellers.

Little did Ed and Bill know what they were starting.

Actually, it was pure chance they even got together, having met each other quite accidentally when both were visiting Yellowstone National Park in 1902.

So Ed invited Bill to come to San Diego and see the area. He took Bill by car and buggy into the back country and Bill liked what he saw. When Bill mentioned he had money to invest and that he wanted a place to retire to, that did it.

You see Ed had tried to finance purchase of Villa Caro and Alta Ranches in El Cajon Valley, and they included Grossmont. Yes, he tried, but even though the property was a steal at $11,500 no one would loan him that much money.

So when Ed showed Bill that mountain and the ranches it was "Katy bar the door" as far as Bill going for the package. Bill put up half the money with an instant check and Ed got San Diego Trust and Savings Bank to loan him the other half.

So, Ed Fletcher, then 29 years old, produce salesman, became Ed Fletcher, land promoter and developer, destined to become rich and very important in San Diego county's history.

And William Gross, then in his 60s, a theatrical impresario most of his life, began his looked-for life of retirement as "Lord of the Mountain" in a brand-new setting, called Grossmont.

Very strange because he had never been so far West before. But what wasn't so strange was his acquaintanceship with people of the entertainment world, in particular a lady named Madame Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who was acknowledged the finest operatic contralto in the world.

By sheer coincidence she wanted to build a home somewhere in California. When Bill and Ed showed her Grossmont in 1910 she thought it was the most heavenly place she had ever been.

There was no question, she would have them build her a house high up on that mountain called Grossmont.

And besides that she wanted an orange grove, and 400 acres of Eucalyptus trees in Lakeside. She got everything, for $20,000.

Two years after her purchase she penned Ed Fletcher this note, dated March 3, 1912:

"My dear good friend - I read so much about paradise - well I think I found my dreams realized when I saw Grossmont in our blessed California, and I am happy as a child in my wonderful future home. Always yours, Tini Schumann-Heink."

Her house would not be completed for another six months. But it was a large house-6,000 square feet-and hauling all the building materials up to her summit-site was a real job, especially on the rough dirt road.

It wasn't long before Grossmont drew more top-name celebrities, among them Carrie Jacobs Bond, composer and Havrah Hubbard, noted music critic.

Grossmont's "Colony for Artists" had made a brave start. The word was getting out. Especially in the entertainment world.

Nearing retirement, famed author Owen Wister met Ed Fletcher and together they bought acreage and a home site for Wister. He ordered a house built. He thought the view from Grossmont was one of the finest he had ever seen.

Actually Wister, best known for his western novel "The Virginian," never did reside in his Grossmont home, due to the unexpected death of his wife. But he did come now and then.

There were other world-class music celebs, pianist Teresa Carreno, and operatic soprano Johanna Gadski. Both bought building sites on Grossmont, but Teresa died at 64 from an illness, and Johanna was killed in an auto accident in South Africa.

Fletcher's home, called Grossmont Inn, was a rambling showcase. And it was just what the doctor ordered if you wanted to show off your mountain.

Visitors could take the train from San Diego, disembarking at the Grossmont station. Hop into Dan McFall's "buggy with the fringe on top" and get off en route to the summit for a restful stop and a cup of tea.

Later, when Grace Godwin-Sperry came west from Greenwich Village, New York she took over Ed's Inn, advertising it as a place for interesting and interested people.

Madame Schumann-Heink's house

Grace, whose "Garret" in Greenwich was a hangout for entertainers, offered lodging, meals, dancing parties, bridge, and the hospitality of her home, the Inn.

With Madame Schumann-Heink its first most prominent and enthusiastic resident, Grossmont was often in the news.

She was not there much of the year due to extensive concert touring throughout the U.S., but when she was at home she would invite her friends to come to San Diego on the train and her chauffeur would drive them to Grossmont.

Once after a concert in 1913 in Los Angeles she asked San Francisco newsman John D. Barry. She told him she lived in a shack. Boy, was he surprised when he saw her sumptuous home on the mountain, and wrote a whole column on his stay there, describing a multi-course dinner prepared by none other than the lord of the mountain himself, Bill Gross.

During World War I she was once suspected of being a spy for Germany. She had begun her career there of course, but actually was born in Austria, in 1861.

Her neighbor, Carrie Jacobs Bond, seeing mysterious flashing lights at Madame's estate one night, called the Army and they sent a small troop of soldiers to watch.

When Schumann-Heink heard of this (she was away on tour) she hired security guards to sit alongside the soldiers. In time they realized how ridiculous the whole thing was, and everyone left.

Madame was hardly a spy. She spent many months going to camps singing for the servicemen, and also doing concerts to help sell war bonds.

In addition to the spy matter, there was a murder on the Schumann-Heink estate. The victim was a young ex-German sailor stranded in the U.S., name of Willie Besthorn, who disappeared shortly after he came to work in the estate gardens.

The Aug. 3, 1918 issue of the La Mesa Scout reported the discovery of a bone in the yard, dug up by Jimmy the family dog.

The bone, said The Scout, in a rather quaint way, "had been owned by Besthorn." It was part of his arm, if you wish to know.

Despite the fact that Leslie Lee, the Korean cook, had also vanished the same day as Besthorn, and the fact that Besthorn had stolen Lee's girl friend (maid Francesca Tapia) there was no effort to catch Lee or to charge him with the crime. Strange, indeed.

Married three times, Madame had four children by her first husband Ernest Heink, three more by Paul Schumann and one more by adoption.

Marie, Madame's second daughter, married Hubert Guy Sr., father of Hubert Jr., who wrote the book on Grossmont, and whose widow, Jean, lives in Madame's home, which has been occupied by "the family" ever since it was built in 1912.

"Each of us had done a bit of re-modeling. This room, for example, was an open porch originally, "Jean explained. "On a clear day we can see Mount Baldy, and that is at least 100 miles away."

Helix High School opened in 1951 to reduce the number of students at Grossmont from La Mesa and Lemon Grove. Today there are 2,100 young people enrolled.

A reduction in 9th grade class size in English and Social Science permits greater emphasis on reading and writing. Overall grade-point average is now at 2.81 for males and 3.07 for females, an all-time high.

Construction on Mount Miguel High got off to a rocky start in 1955 with heavy rain washing out foundation footings and two strikes in 1956. The 1,854 students who arrived in September, 1956 found portable toilets and water bottles to meet their basic needs.

Enrollment reached 2,700 in 1961, eased by transferring some to newly-built Monte Vista and Helix and Grossmont.

Roy Anthony was 1995 California State Teacher of the Year.

Now there is an 11th high school on the drawing board, Steele Canyon in Jamul, with an expected enrollment of 1,850 students and featuring considerable space for "technical discovery," a discipline strongly linked to computer-age education and exploration.

The state has set aside $39 million, with ground-breaking expected later this year, according to the district's Linda Robinson.

Technical discovery is not new to the district, Robinson said, "except we have had to make-do with space once occupied by metal, wood and auto shops in some cases. It has never been built-in before."
